Xinhang Xu
96 Jinzhai Ave. Hefei City, Anhui Province, China, 230026

Dear Dr. Xinhang Xu,

Professor Neville Luhmann Jr. in the Department of Electrical & Computer Engineering is pleased to offer you a Postdoctoral Scholar position beginning February 1, 2024 and ending January 31, 2026. We are delighted that you are coming to UC Davis to pursue your research interests.

This appointment is assigned at 100% time with an annual rate of $64,480. Your primary appointment title and code is Postdoctoral Scholar, 3252. Your funding will come from 3-NLHIGHK. Your faculty supervisor/mentor is Professor Luhmann, and their contact information is ncluhmann@ucdavis.edu, (530)752-5414. Contingent upon mutual agreement, satisfactory performance and the availability of funds, your appointment may be renewed. It is within the university's sole discretion to appoint, reappoint, or not reappoint a postdoctoral scholar.

At UC Davis, a postdoctoral scholar is one who trains under the direction of a (research) mentor in a substantial full-time program of advanced research and training beyond the doctoral level, in preparation for an independent career. Postdoctoral scholars may expect the opportunity for collaborative and independent research and publication as determined by mutual agreement with their mentor.

As a postdoctoral scholar you will be expected to involve in the development of high-k scattering diagnostic on NSTX-Upgrade facility, which focusing on electron density fluctuations. You will work on the diagnostic hardware development, including (1) high-k transmitter module integration and characterization measurement in laboratory, (2) receiver array development and laboratory qualification, (3) phase demodulation electronics testing, (4) data acquisition and interpretation module development. (5) synthetic scattering module application. You will also be involving in the high-k scattering installation on NSTX-Upgrade. Your primary worksite location Princeton Plasma Physics Laboratory.

In accordance with Article 21 Progress Assessments, in the CBA, your supervisor/mentor is required to provide you with at least one written evaluation per 12-month appointment. You may request that the goals and expectations on which you will be assessed be provided in writing.

In accordance with Article 22 – Reasonable Accommodation (link to article), Postdoctoral Scholars who need reasonable accommodation should notify their departments in advance of their start date, or any time during your employment, to begin the interactive process.

All offers are contingent upon evidence of the doctoral degree and documentation of employment eligibility in compliance with the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986. Your department representative Rebecca Bailey, rbailey@ucdavis.edu, will be able to discuss these documentation issues with you upon your acceptance of this position. In addition, Services for International Students and Scholars (SISS) is available to answer questions you may have. You will find them online at <http://sisss.ucdavis.edu>.

The UC Davis Office of Graduate
